

Stack Rock Trail

The Mountain Home Ranger District and City of Boise completed construction of a new trail connection from the Stack Rock Trailhead into the Ridge to Rivers Trail system. Construction of the new trail connection to Stack Rock Trail began May 22, 2019 and was completed by late summer of 2019.

The Stack Rock trail is an awesome intermediate-level day hike with lots of shade. Beginning from the trailhead about 13 miles up Bogus Basin Road (look for a gravel pull-out on your left), the Stack Rock trail winds through the beautiful pine trees. The trail leads to Stack Rock, an imposing granite tower with amazing 360 degree views of the Treasure Valley, Horseshoe Bend, and beyond.

Recently installed signage makes the trail easy to follow. There's one section of logging road but the rest is mostly single-track goodness. At about 9 miles out and back, this is not a beginner hike, but it's relatively flat and not too strenuous. The trail is primarily used for hiking, rock climbing, and bird watching and is best used from April until October. Dogs are also able to use this trail.

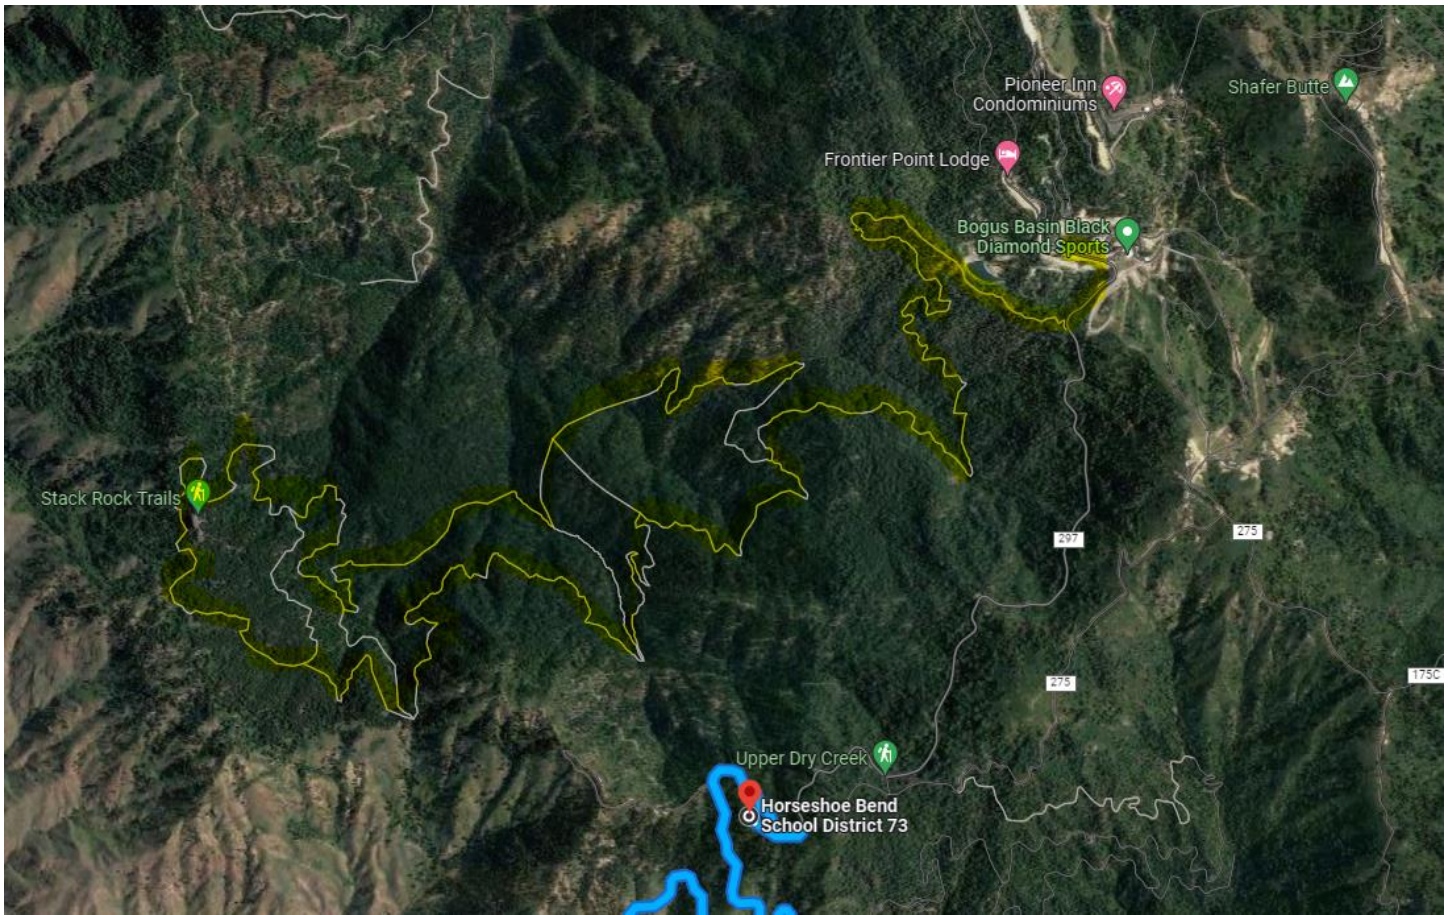

<https://goo.gl/maps/2VidFTU6UNTuFSUx5>

Better trailer parking up in the Bogus Basin parking lot, using Eastside trail head.

<https://boisetrails.com/trail/stack-rock-hike/> MAP

The Stack Rock trail is an awesome intermediate-level day hike with lots of shade. Beginning from the trailhead about 13 miles up Bogus Basin Road (look for a gravel pull-out on your left), the Stack Rock trail winds through the sweet, sweet pine trees. The trail leads to Stack Rock, an imposing granite tower with amazing 360 degree views of the Treasure Valley, Horseshoe Bend, and beyond. Recently installed signage makes the trail easy to follow. There's one section of logging road but the rest is mostly singletrack goodness. At about 9 miles out and back, this is not a beginner hike, but it's relatively flat and not too strenuous.